Aloha Neighbors,

Central Pacific Hurricane Season, which includes our Hawaiian islands, is designated to be from June through November. This is an important season to be prepared for, so much so that there are a wide variety of resources out there to encourage preparedness.

Among these resources, the State Department of Health (DOH) has a "Take 10" guide with 10 essential items that you should have packed in case of an emergency.

Along with a similar checklist, the State's Hawaii Emergency Management Agency (HI-EMA) has a short YouTube video that suggests to gradually build your emergency kit over time. Trying to build a complete kit all at once can be both intimidating and cost prohibitive but buying 1 or 2 extra items every shopping trip makes everything more manageable.
