City Updates Pedestrian Stop-Awareness Signs Across O'ahu

Only 66% of drivers stop for pedestrians at studied intersections. On average, one person dies in a traffic crash every week on O'ahu. Ten percent of these fatal crashes involve drivers failing to stop for people crossing the street on foot. Hawai'i state law HRS § 291C-72 requires drivers to stop for pedestrians crossing the roadway in a crosswalk when the law's conditions apply.

In response to the alarming number of serious injuries and deaths on O'ahu's roadways, the Honolulu City Council adopted Resolution 18-219, and the Hawai'i State Legislature passed Act 134 (2019), advancing Vision Zero efforts to eliminate traffic-related deaths and serious injuries.

The City adopted the O'ahu Vision Zero Action Plan in 2024, prioritizing actions to improve safety for pedestrians and other road users and provide safe, healthy, and equitable transportation choices for all.

The pedestrian safety signs and related educational efforts are among several initiatives underway across O'ahu to reduce crashes resulting in serious injuries and deaths. Other efforts include pedestrian crossing islands, road diets, pedestrian crossing beacons, red-light-running camera enforcement, raised pedestrian crossings, and Complete Streets projects.
