Senator Koki rose on a point of personal privilege and stated:

"Mr. President, I rise on a point of personal privilege.

"The opening of the Bureau of Conveyances on Friday has not been as successful as I had hoped. In fact, the title companies are not issuing any title insurance because of the way the bureau is functioning.

"There seems to be a misunderstanding by strikers of what a strike is supposed to do. In the private sector, a strike is supposed to hurt the employer. The employer then would negotiate according to how much business it is losing. However, a public sector strike is different. The employer is not hurt financially. In fact, the government is actually saving money. The parties that are being hurt are the citizens of Hawaii. And the citizens are not authorized to settle the strike.

"I already own my home. The bureau being closed does not personally affect me. However, I understand the importance of home ownership. It is the most expensive and one of the most important pursuits of our citizens.

"I empathize with workers' demands for an additional two percent wage increase. But must the strike hurt a small group of people who simply want to buy a home at an affordable cost? These people do not have the influence to effect the pay raise the union wants. Will the bureau being closed settle the strike? What good is accomplished by all this suffering. Hurting people is no way to settle a public sector strike.

"I want to re-emphasize the major importance of the bureau being opened at this time of dramatically escalating interest rates that will delay or destroy the ability for some of Hawaii's citizens to own a home.

"As a public servant, I implore the HGEA to make good on their agreement to open the bureau for the entire day. I also again call on the governor to declare the employees at the Bureau of Conveyances to be essential workers.

"Thank you."

Senator Chang rose in response to the previous speaker as follows:

"Mr. President, I'd like to comment briefly on the remarks of personal privilege that have been extended by the previous Senator.

"It seems to me that the people of Hawaii are the employers of the workers that are on strike. Through their agents -- the various directors, the governor, the legislators and the like -- the people of Hawaii have a vital interest, as the employers of these workers, in insuring that this labor dispute is resolved in a satisfactory fashion. It is incumbent upon those who are affected by this strike -- citizens and government agents, alike -- to implore those who are charged with addressing the issues to bring this to a rapid and satisfactory solution. To the extent that these potential home owners have a concern, it is in their interest to communicate their difficulties to the government agents so that this whole negotiation is expedited."

Senator Ikeda also responded:

"First of all, Mr. President, just briefly in response to the comments made on a point of personal privilege. I think that it is a fallacy when people think the state is actually saving money during the strike. We have to take into consideration, not only the increases in pay at the end of the strike, but the fact that overtime payments will have to be made in order to catch up with the backlog. There is no savings ... just a lot of grief ... for those on strike as well as those affected by the strike."
