Senator Hooser rose on a point of personal privilege and said:

"I don't know how many checked their CNN.com news site today or watched CNN on TV, but I'm very proud of the residents in District 7 of Kaua'i and Ni'ihau. There's a front page story, if you would, about residents gathering together and overcoming some significant obstacles with regard to the closure of parks. As we all know, the state is in some dire budget conditions right now, and Polihale Park has been closed to the public, and it's really a treasure of a park. It's been closed since December and the state has not had the money to repair the park—to fix the road, to fix the bridges—and the Department of Land and Natural Resources had estimated it to be a $4 million project to do this and might take up to a year to complete. But the citizens of Kaua'i got together with the Department of Land and Natural Resources. Their livelihoods were being threatened, their businesses. Some private residents weren't able to go to the beach—go fishing, go surfing—and they were tired of waiting for government's help, so business owners and residents pulled together and completed the $4 million repair state job to a state park for free. They did this with contribution of many businesses, contractors, private citizens; they did in 8 days what the state had estimated it might take up to a year to do, and the park is now fixed. They're getting ready to do their final inspections. I think this is just an indication of the type of citizenship, the type of working together, the type of public-private partnerships that we all talk about, but this in action. And I just want to acknowledge the people in my community, specifically Bruce Pleas, who's a local surfer who helped organize the volunteers. The list of people who contributed is far too long to read today, but I want to applaud their actions and point out again they saved the state $4 million. And I would like to ask the Co-Chair of the Ways and Means Committee to please credit the District 7 CIP list with that amount so we can move on to other projects. Thank you, Madam President."

At this time, the Chair made the following announcement:

"The deadline for filing House bills to be positioned for Third Reading on Tuesday is 6:00 p.m. tonight.

"Referrals and re-referrals are made in accordance with the Supplemental Order of the Day that may be distributed to your offices later this afternoon."
