At this time, Senator Gabbard rose to speak on a point of personal privilege as follows:

“Mr. President, colleagues, staff, and guests: on this auspicious day, we are celebrating two important events—Earth Day and happy Aloha Hemp Friday. For Earth Day, as I finish my 13th year as your Environment committee chair, I want to mahalo each of you who have helped over the years to basically keep paradise paradise. We still have much work to do, so let’s continue trying our best to mālama ‘āina. If you haven’t already, and if the spirit moves you, for you tree huggers, I hope that you’ll go outside in your backyard and embrace your plumeria or papaya tree, or maybe take a stroll down the beach at sunset or even around your neighborhood and appreciate the natural beauty that surrounds us. So, Happy Earth Day; mahalo ke akua.

“And as far as happy Aloha Hemp Day, for those of you who don’t know or don’t remember, a bit of hemp history. It was in 1999: Act 305 was enacted in Hawai‘i, establishing a hemp research project on a small plot in Wahiawā that lasted three years. Hemp shampoo maker of Alterna Professional haircare products funded the project with a $200,000 grant, and the results of the project found that the Chinese variety of hemp seed was the best for Hawai‘i. Governor Cayetano declared December 14, 1999, as Industrial Hemp Day, and marked Hawai‘i as the first U.S. state to plant industrial hemp seed since World War II. There’s an old saying about the wheels of government turning painfully slowly, and we’ve come a long way since then. In 2014, the federal Farm Bill included a provision to allow the growing of industrial hemp for research purposes as long as it’s connected to a university or department of ag. We’ve gone from 8 licensed hemp farmers in 2018, to 50 in 2020, to 91 USDA-licensed hemp growers as of December 2021. So, although our Hawai‘i hemp industry is still in the process of successfully growing, we’re hopeful the future will bring bountiful harvest of this remarkable plant. Fellow hempsters: don’t forget, immediately following session, we’ll meet in the Rotunda with our House hempsters for a group photo. Mahalo, and hemp hemp hooray!”

The Chair then made the following announcement:

“The deadline to file committee reports on amended House concurrent resolutions in order to meet Monday’s second crossover deadline is 4:30 p.m. today. The Senate Floor Action Memo will include a list this evening of all resolutions to be scheduled for adoption on Monday.”
