JAMES R. CORCORAN, PH.D.
COLONEL U.S. ARMY (RETIRED)

Dr. Corcoran received his Ph.D. in Modern Chinese History and an MA in Asian Studies concentrating on Chinese history from the University of Hawaii, and he is a graduate of the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, New York. He is Assistant Professor of History and Asian Studies and Curriculum Area Liaison, History and Diplomacy & Military Studies for Military Campus Programs at Hawaii Pacific University jcorcoran@hpu.edu. He has lived, studied, and worked in China, Taiwan, Vietnam, Japan, South Korea, Bangladesh, and Indonesia, with service in Germany and also with the U.S. Army's First Infantry Division in Vietnam. Dr. Corcoran is a graduate of the U.S. Army War College, the U.S. Army Command and General Staff College, the Defense Language Institute (Mandarin Chinese and Bahasa Indonesia), and numerous other government and civilian schools and institutes. He served two tours of duty as the Director of Asian Studies and faculty instructor in the Department of National and International Security Studies at the U.S. Army War College, Carlisle Barracks, Pennsylvania during the 1980s and 1990s. His written works include a series of reports, contracted by the National Defense University over the past decade dealing with Asian security issues, as well as various reviews and other occasional papers dealing with China, Asia, and military history. His research and writing interests focus on issues of security, strategy and history of Asia relating to the conduct of war, strategic intelligence, conflict resolution, diplomacy, Just War ethics, and war termination.
