THIRTY-THIRD LEGISLATURE, 2026

ON THE FOLLOWING MEASURE:

S.B. NO. 2982, S.D. 2, RELATING TO CAMPAIGN FINANCE.

BEFORE THE:

HOUSE COMMITTEE ON JUDICIARY & HAWAIIAN AFFAIRS

DATE: Wednesday, March 18, 2026 TIME: 2:00 p.m.

LOCATION: State Capitol, Room 325

TESTIFIER(S): Anne E. Lopez, Attorney General, or Jung Min (Charles) Lee, Deputy Attorney General

Chair Tarnas and Members of the Committee:

The Department of the Attorney General (Department) provides the following comments on this bill.

This bill prohibits foreign entities and "foreign-influenced business entit[ies]" (page 4, line 17) from making contributions, expenditures, electioneering communications, or donations for election purposes. It also imposes certification requirements on business entities and noncandidate committees. The S.D. 2 version of the bill replaced the required advertisement disclaimer with a statement that reads: "The following top contributor(s) did not provide certification regarding foreign influence" (page 16, lines 1-3). This revision addresses the Department's prior concern regarding the disclaimer language.

The Department identifies the following two concerns with the S.D. 2 version of the bill.

First, the bill requires business entities to file certifications with the Campaign Spending Commission "under penalty of perjury." See proposed section 11-356(d) (page 8, lines 14-15), section 11-356(e) (page 9, line 5), and section 11-356(g) (page 10, line 9). A false certification filed with the Commission would not meet the elements of perjury under section 710-1060, Hawaii Revised Statutes (HRS), because filing a certification with the Commission does not constitute an "official proceeding" as defined in section 710-1000 of the Hawaii Penal Code. The Department believes that a false certification under these provisions would instead meet the elements of unsworn falsification to authorities under section 710-1063, HRS. By contrast, the top-contributor certification in proposed section 11-393(d) (page 15, lines 13-17) correctly requires the certification to be "signed under oath as defined in, and on a form as described in, section 710-1000" and imposes liability "under penalty of law," properly aligning with the false-swearing offense under section 710-1062, HRS.

Second, the definition of "foreign-influenced business entity" (page 4, line 17, through page 5, line 12) is broad and may sweep in domestic businesses based on relatively low levels of foreign beneficial ownership, without a clear showing that foreign investors exercise control over, or direct, the entity's election-related spending. To the extent the bill restricts political spending by domestic entities with limited foreign ownership and no demonstrated foreign control, challengers may argue that the restriction is overbroad and insufficiently tailored to the State's interests, raising First Amendment concerns.

To address these concerns, the Department respectfully recommends the following amendments: (1) replace "under penalty of perjury" with "under penalty of law" in sections 11-356(d), (e), and (g), and adopt the oath formalities used in section 11-393(d) (i.e., "signed under oath as defined in, and on a form as described in, section 710-1000") for consistency and enforceability; and (2) narrow the definition of "foreign-influenced business entity" by raising the ownership thresholds, requiring a showing that foreign investors have the ability to direct or control the entity's election-related spending, or both.

Thank you for the opportunity to testify.

Thank you for the opportunity to testify on this bill. The Campaign Spending Commission (“Commission”) supports the intent of this bill and offers the following comments.

This bill amends Hawaii Revised Statutes (“HRS”) §11-302 by adding the definitions of “business entity,” “foreign-influenced business entity,” and “foreign investor.” This bill further amends HRS §11-356 by prohibiting foreign nationals, foreign corporations, and foreign-influenced business entities from making contributions, expenditures, independent expenditures, electioneering communications, or donations to a person that is earmarked for campaign spending purpose and requires the business entity to file a statement of certification that contributions or expenditures was not made from a foreign corporation or foreign-influenced business entity. The bill also permits a noncandidate committee from including a disclaimer that funds may have been provided by a foreign corporation or foreign-influences business entity if the noncandidate committee is unable to obtain a statement of certification. Additionally, the bill amends HRS §11-393 by requiring a super PAC to obtain a certification from each of its top contributors required to be listed in the super PAC’s advertisement disclaimer that none of the funds contributed by the top contributors were derived from a foreign corporation or foreign-influenced business entity.

Section 3 of the bill requires that if a foreign-influenced business is deemed to be unconstitutional then the Commission will need to establish revised conditions so the foreign-influenced entity will be constitutional. Determining the constitutionality of entities is beyond the Commission's expertise and we defer these issues to the Department of the Attorney General. We respectfully request this section be amended accordingly.

The Commission notes that any contributions made in violation of this bill shall escheat to the Hawaii Election Campaign Fund. The Commission maintains that any illegal contribution should not remain with the candidate or noncandidate committee as a windfall and should be forfeited to the general fund. The Commission appreciates the delayed effective date to January 1, 2028, to provide time for the Commission to create certification forms, establish internal administrative procedures, create educational materials, and provide educational trainings to implement this bill.

Thank you for the opportunity to submit testimony.

Testimony in Strong Support of SB2982

Chair Tarnas, Vice Chair Poepoe, and Members of the Committee,

UNITE HERE Local 5 represents over 10,000 working people in the hotel, food service and health care industries across Hawaii.

SB2982 would help to keep our democracy in the hands of the people by making significant strides to remove the influence of foreign corporations. Hawai'i's governance should be determined first and foremost by Hawai'i's people - not by real estate speculators, investment firms, or others seeking to exploit our state's resources, 'āina and people for profit. In order for us to build a sustainable future where working families can thrive, we must limit as much as possible the influence of profiteers operating within a framework that rewards short-term gains without looking at long-term consequences; and which rewards individual enrichment over the best interests of everyone. SB2982 is a step towards putting control over our futures back in the hands of the people of Hawai'i.

Elections are increasingly influenced by money in politics. Large corporations and high-net-worth individuals have far more money to spend on elections than working class people, local groups, or local businesses. This has resulted in candidates getting elected who are beholden to large donors, and who, as a result, tend to legislate in those donors' interests, rather than in the interests of our communities.

SB2982 reflects public sentiment. Policies that aim to remove unfair financial influence over our democratic process are supported by a vast majority of the American people¹.

We applaud any effort to protect our system of self-governance from outside corporate influence. We applaud policymakers who work with complex constitutional legal frameworks to fight foreign corporate influence of our political system.

We are in support of SB2982. We urge you to protect our political system from unwanted, harmful outside influence by working to pass SB2982.

Thank you for this opportunity to testify.

TESTIMONY OF THE ILWU INTERNATIONAL – HAWAII IN SUPPORT OF SB2982 SD2 RELATING TO CAMPAIGN FINANCE

Honorable Chair Tarnas, Vice Chair Poepoe, and Members of the Committee,

The International Longshore and Warehouse Union (ILWU) Hawai‘i stands in strong support of SB2982, a critical measure to protect Hawai‘i’s elections from foreign interference.

Our union was built on the principle that democracy works only when political power rests with the people who live, work, and raise families here. Hawai‘i’s future should be shaped by Hawai‘i voters, not by foreign governments, foreign-controlled corporations, or global financial interests that have no stake in our communities.

While federal law already prohibits direct political spending by foreign nationals, experience has shown that foreign money can still enter U.S. elections through complex corporate ownership structures, shell companies, and opaque financing. SB2982 strengthens Hawai‘i’s ability to detect and deter that kind of influence by increasing transparency and accountability in political spending.

This bill does not target ordinary businesses. It targets the use of corporate structures to mask foreign influence in our elections. Voters have a right to know when political messages are being funded by entities with significant foreign ties, and SB2982 provides the disclosure and certification tools needed to make that possible.

At a time when confidence in democratic institutions is under strain, SB2982 sends a clear message: Hawai‘i’s elections are not for sale. They belong to the people of this state.

For these reasons, the ILWU International Hawai‘i urges the committee to pass SB2982 and strengthen the integrity and transparency of our elections.

Respectfully,

Brandon Wolff

RE: Free Speech For People Written Testimony in Support of Senate Bill 2982 to prohibit foreign-influenced business entity election spending in Hawaii

On behalf of Free Speech For People, we write in strong support of passing SB 2982, legislation to ban corporate political spending by foreign-influenced business entities in Hawaii. Free Speech For People is a national nonpartisan non-profit organization that has helped to develop and advocate for model legislation in consultation with the Center for American Progress and with noted legal experts, including Prof. Laurence Tribe of Harvard Law School, one of the foremost constitutional law scholars in the country; Prof. John Coates of Harvard Law School, a corporate governance expert and former General Counsel of the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission; former Commissioner Ellen Weintraub of the Federal Election Commission, an expert on campaign finance law; Prof. Brian Quinn of Boston College Law School, an expert in corporate law and policy; and Professor Adam Winkler of the University of California Law School, an expert on corporations and the Constitution. They have each supported similar legislation in other states.

We strongly urge you to take similar steps to protect Hawaii's elections. The incorporated memorandum explains why SB 2982 is a constitutional, commonsense proposal that will provide critical protections for Hawaii's democratic self-government. In Section I of the memorandum, we set forth the general and legal background for the proposed bill; Section II explains the foreign ownership thresholds; and Section III answers frequently-asked questions that have emerged as we have developed this legislation.

I. General and legal background

Under well-established federal law, upheld by the U.S. Supreme Court in 2012, it is illegal for a foreign government, business, or individual to spend any amount of money, “directly or indirectly,” to influence federal, state, or local elections.¹ This existing provision is a blanket prohibition. As then-Judge (now Justice) Brett Kavanaugh wrote in the seminal decision upholding this law:

It is fundamental to the definition of our national political community that foreign citizens do not have a constitutional right to participate in, and thus may be excluded from, activities of democratic self-government. It follows, therefore, that the United States has a compelling interest for purposes of First Amendment analysis in limiting the participation of foreign citizens in activities of American democratic self-government, and in thereby preventing foreign influence over the U.S. political process.²

At the time the legislation was written, all corporations were subject to strict contribution and independent expenditure limits. It is therefore not surprising that the drafters of the legislation, despite clear intentions to block all avenues for foreign money to directly or indirectly be spent on U.S. elections, did not specifically address election spending by the type of corporation at issue here: foreign-influenced business entities, which are incorporated in the United States but which are materially owned by foreign investors.

The U.S. Supreme Court’s 2010 Citizens United decision lifted federal limitations on independent expenditures by corporations.³ Its holding rests on its theory that corporations have speech rights because they are “associations of citizens.”⁴ It did not “reach the question” of corporations partly owned by foreign investors because the law before it applied to all corporations.⁵

As a result, federal law currently does not prevent foreign-influenced business entities (FIBEs) from making contributions to super PACs, independent expenditures, expenditures on ballot measure campaigns, or even (in states where it is otherwise legal) contributions directly to candidates. But it is also clear that the Citizens United decision does not curtail Hawaii’s authority to protect its democratic self-government by prohibiting election spending by FIBEs, which are, by definition, not associations of citizens.

Two years after Citizens United, the Supreme Court affirmed Bluman v. FEC, the three-judge panel decision authored by then-Judge Kavanaugh of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the D.C. Circuit, sitting by designation, which upheld a total prohibition on foreign governments, individuals, or entities from spending on U.S. elections. In Bluman, the court acknowledged that the government’s concern for its elections “is part of a common international understanding of the meaning of sovereignty and shared concern about foreign influence over elections.” Bluman, 800 F. Supp. 2d at 291-91. The state’s compelling interest in its own democratic self-government ultimately is sufficient to justify a total ban on election spending by foreign entities. Indeed, the case’s lead plaintiff was a valid visa holder who had lived, been educated, and worked in the United States for years and sought to spend a vanishingly small amount of money, including minor expenditures to print flyers in support of a candidate. None of these facts could overcome the basic principles espoused by the court: that elections are at the heart of democratic self-government, and stringent limitations on the participation of foreign entities are constitutional, up to and including a complete prohibition on direct or indirect election spending by foreign nationals, governments, or entities.

Since 2010, neither Congress nor the beleaguered Federal Election Commission have done anything to prevent FIBEs from spending money on U.S. elections. However, as Professor Laurence Tribe of Harvard Law School and former Federal Election Commissioner Ellen Weintraub have written, a state does not need to wait for federal action to protect its state and local elections from foreign influence. Hawaii can act now.

And it should. Foreign-influenced corporations, speaking for their powerful foreign shareholders and acting on their behalf, are spending on local and state elections throughout the country. For example, Uber, DoorDash, and AirB&B have spent significant sums of money on elections across the country in recent years. DoorDash is 7% owned by Singapore's sovereign wealth fund; the Saudi government made an enormous (and critical) early investment in Uber and still owns several percent of the company's stock.⁶ In California, Uber spent $58 million on Proposition 22, which successfully overturned worker protections for Uber drivers.⁷ Uber and DoorDash spent millions on a similar ballot measure in Massachusetts in 2023,⁸ and poured money into New York City's local elections in 2025.⁹

Similarly, in October 2016, Airbnb responded to the New York Legislature's growing interest in regulating the homestay industry by arming a super PAC with $10 million to influence New York's legislative races.¹⁰ Airbnb received crucial early funding from, and was at that time partly owned by, Moscow-based (and Kremlin-linked) DST Global.¹¹

In the New York Times, then-Federal Election Commissioner Ellen Weintraub explained the problem, and pointed to a solution: “Throughout Citizens United, the court described corporations as ‘associations of citizens,’ she wrote. “States can require entities accepting political contributions from corporations in state and local races to make sure that those corporations are indeed associations of American citizens—and enforce the ban on foreign political spending against those that are not.”¹²

As Weintraub noted, partial foreign ownership of corporations changes the Citizens United calculus. Foreign-influenced corporations are not “associations of citizens,” and indeed Citizens United expressly reserved questions related to foreign shareholders.¹³ And, after deciding Citizens United, the Supreme Court in Bluman v. FEC specifically upheld the federal ban on foreign nationals spending their own money in U.S. elections.¹⁴ In light of the Court’s post-Citizens United decision in Bluman, a restriction on political spending by corporations with foreign ownership at levels capable of influencing corporate governance is constitutional.¹⁵

¹⁵ A similar analysis would also apply to First Nat. Bank of Boston v. Bellotti, 435 U.S. 765 (1978), which addressed limits on corporations spending in ballot question elections. In a decision that tramples over a state’s right to protect its own democratic self-governance from foreign interference, a federal district court judge in Minnesota on February 7, 2025, permanently enjoined Minn. Stat. § 211B.15, a Minnesota statute that bars foreign-influenced corporations from spending unlimited money in Minnesota’s elections. The decision undermines the state’s authority to protect its elections and empowers corporations to serve as conduits through which powerful foreign entities can exert influence over U.S. corporations. And it is based on a misreading of prior Supreme Court rulings and of the evidence before the court. See further discussion on this ruling in the frequently asked questions section below.

II. Foreign influence and ownership thresholds

How much foreign investment renders a corporation's political spending problematic for protection of democratic self-government? Arguably, any foreign ownership in companies that spend money to influence our elections is a threat to democratic self-government. Corporate shareholders are “the firm’s residual claimants.”¹⁶ As explained by the California Court of Appeal, “it is the shareholders who own a corporation, which is managed by the directors. In an economic sense, when a corporation is solvent, it is the shareholders who are the residual claimants of the corporation’s assets”¹⁷

In practice, shareholders rarely have the opportunity to actually assert these residual claims. Yet there is a sense in which investors and corporate managers alike understand that the corporation’s assets “belong to” the shareholders. That means that corporate political spending is drawn from shareholders’ money. As Justice Stevens noted in his dissent from the Citizens United decision, “When corporations use general treasury funds to praise or attack a particular candidate for office, it is the shareholders, as the residual claimants, who are effectively footing the bill.”¹⁸

¹⁶ Henry Hansmann & Reiner Kraakman, The End of History for Corporate Law, 89 Geo. L.J. 439, 449 (2001); see also Stephen M. Bainbridge, Director Primacy: The Means and Ends of Corporate Governance, 97 Nw. U.L. Rev. 547, 565 (2003) (“[M]ost theories of the firm agree, shareholders own the residual claim on the corporation’s assets and earnings.”); Frank H. Easterbrook & Daniel R. Fischel, THE ECONOMIC STRUCTURE OF CORPORATE LAW 36-39 (1991) (arguing that shareholders are entitled to whatever assets remain after the company has met its obligations, and thus are the ultimate “residual claimant[s]” on a company’s assets). While different theories are sometimes offered in academic literature, this is the standard economic model of shareholders of a firm, and it has been widely adopted in judicial decisions. See, e.g., RTP LLC v. ORIX Real Est. Cap., Inc., 827 F.3d 689, 692 (7th Cir. 2016) (“Stockholders and owners of other equity interests have residual claims in a business; they get whatever is left after everyone else is paid.”); In re Franchise Servs. of N. Am., Inc., 891 F.3d 198, 208 n.7 (5th Cir. 2018), as revised (June 14, 2018) (“Shareholders are the residual claimants of the estate,” and are entitled to whatever remains after satisfying creditors); In re Cent. Ill. Energy Coop., 561 B.R. 699, 708 (Bankr. C.D. Ill. 2016) (noting that directors have fiduciary duty to shareholders rather than creditors precisely because “shareholders hav[e] the residual claim to the corporation’s equity value”); Ito v. Investors Equity Life Holding Co., 135 Haw. 49, 80 (2015) (after “all other creditors have been satisfied,” shareholders lay claim to a company’s “shares and the residual estate”).

¹⁷ Berg & Berg Enter., LLC v. Boyle, 100 Cal. Rptr. 3d 875, 892, 178 Cal. App. 4th 1020, 1039 (Cal. App. 2009); accord In re Bear Stearns Litig., 23 Misc. 3d 447, 474, 2008 WL 5220514 (N.Y. Sup. 2008) (shareholders are the “residual beneficiaries of any increase in the company’s value” when it is solvent) (cleaned up).

¹⁸ Citizens United v. Federal Election Comm’n, 558 U.S. 310, 475 (2010) (Stevens, J., dissenting).

On this understanding, any amount of foreign investment in a corporation means that management’s political expenditures come from a pool of partly foreign money. Seen that way, a corporation spending money in U.S. elections no longer qualifies as an “association of citizens” if any of the money in its coffers “belongs to” foreign investors—in other words, when it has any foreign shareholders at all.¹⁹ Indeed, polling indicates that 73% of Americans—including majorities of both Democrats and Republicans—would support banning corporate political spending by corporations with any foreign ownership.²⁰

But we need not reach that far. The proposed law sets a threshold at 1% ownership by a single foreign investor, or 5% ownership by foreign investors in aggregate. These levels reflect commonsense thresholds at which owners hold and can exert significant influence over a corporation.

To someone not deeply versed in corporate governance, it may seem that the right threshold for the point at which a foreign investor (or any investor) can exert influence is just over 50%. That is, after all, the threshold for winning a race between two candidates, or controlling a two-party legislature. But corporations are not legislatures. A better analogy might be a chamber with millions of uncoordinated potential voters, most of whom rarely vote and who may be, for one reason or another, effectively prevented from voting. In that type of environment, a disciplined owner (or ownership bloc) of 1% can be and often is tremendously influential.

As explained in more detail in written testimony submitted by Professor John Coates of Harvard Law School in support of similar legislation elsewhere, and in a report by the Center for American Progress,²¹ the thresholds in this bill—1% of stock owned by a single foreign investor, or 5% owned by multiple foreign investors—reflect levels of ownership that are widely agreed (including by entities such as the Business Roundtable) to be high enough to influence corporate governance. Corporate governance law gives substantial formal power to minority shareholders at these levels, and this spills out into even greater unofficial influence. For this reason, since the passage of Seattle’s 2020 law, best-in-class bills—including that passed in San Jose in 2024, and that is pending in states such as Illinois, Massachusetts, New York, Pennsylvania and Virginia, and in the U.S. Congress—generally follow the Seattle model.

Federal securities law provides powerful tools of corporate influence to investors at these levels. Seattle’s 1% threshold was grounded in a rule of the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission regarding eligibility of shareholders to submit proposals for a shareholder vote—a threshold that the SEC ultimately concluded was, if anything, too high.²² For a large multinational corporation, an investor that owns 1% of shares might well be the largest single stockholder; it would generally land among the top ten. Conversely, as the SEC has acknowledged, many of the investors most active in influencing corporate governance own well below 1% of equity.²³ Investors at this level also can wage or threaten to wage proxy fights, with significant success.²⁴

This does not mean that every investor who owns 1% of shares will always influence corporate governance. However, the business community generally recognizes that this level of ownership presents that opportunity, and—for a foreign investor in the context of corporate political spending—that risk.

In other cases, no single foreign investor holds 1% or more of corporate equity, but multiple foreign investors own a material aggregate stake. While foreign investors may not be perfectly aligned on all issues, they can be assumed to share certain common interests and positions that may, in some cases, differ from those of U.S. shareholders, particularly when it comes to matters of state public policy, or when weighing financial interests against matters of public interest that do not affect them, but which would affect citizens or permanent residents. As the Center for American Progress has noted:

Foreign interests can easily diverge from U.S. interests, for example, in the areas of tax, trade, investment, and labor law. Corporate directors and managers view themselves as accountable to their shareholders, including foreign shareholders.²⁵

Neither corporate law nor empirical research provide a bright-line threshold at which this type of aggregate foreign interest begins to affect corporate decision-making, but anecdotally it appears that CEOs do take note of this aggregate foreign ownership and that at a certain point it affects their decision-making. The Seattle model legislation selects a 5% aggregate foreign ownership threshold. Under federal securities law, 5% is the threshold that Congress has already chosen as the level at which a single investor or group of investors working together can have an influence so significant that the law requires disclosure not only of the stake, but also the residence and citizenship of the investors, the source of the funds, and even in some cases information about the investors' associates.²⁶ In this case, while it may not be appropriate to treat unrelated foreign investors as a single bloc for all purposes, it is appropriate to do so in the context of analyzing how corporate management conceive decision-making regarding political spending in U.S. elections.

The point here is not that FIBEs do not have connections to the state, or that foreign investment in local companies should be discouraged. Rather, the point is simply that Citizens United accorded corporations the right to spend money in our elections on the theory that corporations are “associations of citizens.” But for companies of this type, that theory does not apply. They are at best hybrid associations of citizens and non-citizens; the corporate voice is that of the hybrid association, and the corporation spends their money and serves their interests. Even the corporations acknowledge this. As the former CEO of U.S.-based ExxonMobil

III. Frequently asked questions

Does this bill affect individual immigrants?

No. The bill regulates corporate political spending by business entities. Individuals who are not citizens or permanent residents are barred from election spending by federal law.

Is the bill’s threshold triggered by owners who are (a) green card holders, (b) dual U.S.-foreign citizens, or (c) U.S. citizens residing abroad?

(a) No; (b) no; and (c) no.

Has this bill been endorsed by leading scholars and experts?

Similar bills in other parts of the country have generally been endorsed by Professor Laurence Tribe of Harvard Law School and Professor Adam Winkler of the University of California Law School, experts in constitutional law; Professor John C. Coates IV of Harvard Law School (a former General Counsel and Director of the Division of Corporate Finance at the U.S. Securities Exchange Commission) and Professor Brian Quinn of Boston College School of Law, experts in corporate law and governance; and former Federal Election Commissioner Ellen Weintraub, expert in election law.²⁸

Does this bill have bipartisan support?

A 2019 national poll of 2,633 voters showed that 73%—including majorities of both Democrats and Republicans—would support banning corporate political spending by corporations with any foreign ownership.²⁹ Even after polled individuals were deliberately exposed to partisan framing and opposition messages, voters continued to support the policy 58-24 overall; Trump voters supported it 52-30 and Clinton voters supported it 68-20.

Does this bill prevent corruption?

The Supreme Court currently recognizes two distinct public interests in regulating the amounts and sources of money in politics: (1) preventing corruption or the appearance of corruption, and (2) protecting democratic self-government against foreign influence. The second interest is triggered where, as here, the legislation in question limits foreign spending in, or influence over, U.S. elections. The bill may well prevent corruption; but the state’s primary interest is on protecting its own sovereignty.

As Judge (now Justice) Kavanaugh explained in Bluman, Hawaii’s concern for its elections “is part of a common international understanding of the meaning of sovereignty and shared concern about foreign influence over elections.” Bluman, 800 F.Supp.2d at 291–92. The public “has a compelling interest for purposes of First Amendment analysis in limiting the participation of foreign citizens in activities of American democratic self-government, and in thereby preventing foreign influence over the U.S. political process.”³⁰ The U.S. Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit has confirmed that this interest applies to state elections as well.³¹

Is the bill “narrowly tailored” to protecting democratic self-government?

Yes. The public interest in protecting democratic self-government from foreign influence is particularly strong and supports a wide range of restrictions ranging from investment in communications facilities to municipal public employment.³² In the specific context of political spending, the state’s interest is compelling enough to warrant a total prohibition on foreign nationals, governments, or entities spending directly or indirectly on U.S. elections. Indeed, in that case, the lead plaintiff—a practicing attorney who was licensed to practice law in New York, who had a work visa, and was educated in and worked in the United States--wanted to make small contributions to three candidates and “to print flyers . . . and to distribute them in Central Park.”³³ All these were banned by the federal statute, and the court upheld the ban on all of them.

In other words, the court found that this total prohibition on spending by foreign actors—which blocked a visa-holder from printing flyers—is narrowly tailored to serve the powerful, compelling state interest in protecting democratic self-government. Given that, a ban on corporate political spending—with the potential for far greater influence on elections than one individual printing flyers—by corporations with material foreign ownership is also narrowly tailored to the same interest.

³² See Bluman, 800 F. Supp. 2d at 287 (collecting Supreme Court cases upholding limits on noncitizen employment in a wide variety of local positions); 47 U.S.C. § 310(b) (banning issuance of broadcast or common carrier license to companies under minority foreign ownership).

³³ Id. at 285.

Does this bill go further than the federal statute at issue in Bluman?

Yes; that is the point. The federal statute prevents foreign entities from spending money directly in federal, state, or local elections.³⁴ The proposed bill will extend that prohibition to companies in which those same foreign entities are material owners or investors.

Has the Supreme Court decided how much foreign ownership of a corporation renders a corporation “foreign” for purposes of First Amendment analysis?

No. That issue was not before the Supreme Court in Citizens United, and the Court declined to reach that question. The majority opinion did make a passing reference to corporations “funded predominately by foreign shareholders” as the type of issue that the decision was not addressing.³⁵ Similarly, in Bluman, Judge Kavanaugh wrote that “[b]ecause this case concerns individuals, we have no occasion to analyze the circumstances under which a corporation may be considered a foreign corporation for purposes of First Amendment analysis.”³⁶

Is another court considering whether similar laws are constitutional?

In a decision that tramples over a state’s right to protect its own democratic self-governance from foreign interference, a federal district court judge in Minnesota on February 7, 2025, permanently enjoined Minn. Stat. § 211B.15, a Minnesota statute that bars foreign-influenced corporations from spending unlimited money in Minnesota’s elections. The decision undermines the state’s authority to protect its elections and empowers corporations to serve as conduits through which powerful foreign entities can exert influence over U.S. corporations. And it is based on a misreading of prior Supreme Court rulings and of the evidence before the court.

The ruling veers sharply from Supreme Court precedent, which has recognized that states have a compelling interest in protecting its democratic self-government. It also fails to properly account for the significant evidence the State of Minnesota put before the court that (1) minority shareholders that satisfy the law’s threshold can and do exert direct and indirect influence over corporate decision-making; (2) that such influence is hidden from public view and impossible to track; (3) that foreign governments are seeking to influence U.S. elections and have spent millions of dollars to do so; and (4) that foreign entities in fact have used corporations to unlawfully funnel money into U.S. elections. Further, the ruling provides foreign-influenced corporations with protections to which individuals are not entitled and demands states meet arbitrarily high evidentiary standards to support its interest in democratic self-government. Our further analysis on this ruling and a link to the court's opinion is available here.

The district court of Maine, in a decision affirmed by the First Circuit, also has temporarily enjoined a different law, which prohibits spending by corporations materially owned by foreign governments, and which did not draw from the model upon which this bill is based. These decisions, too, significantly misapprehend Supreme Court precedent and corporate governance. The injunction is temporary, while Maine continues to vigorously defend its law.

These rulings are not binding on courts with jurisdiction over Hawaii. And not all laws prohibiting foreign-influenced political spending have faced legal challenges. Seattle prohibited FIC political spending in January 2020 and San Jose, California did the same in January 2024; both laws are uncontested.

Unless and until the Supreme Court considers this issue again, courts are bound by the premise of Bluman: that states have a compelling interest to preserve their democratic self-government from the encroachment of foreign money and influence.

Do corporations know who their shareholders are?

Managers of privately-held corporations know or can immediately obtain the identity of all shareholders at all times. Managers of publicly-traded corporations easily can obtain a complete list of shareholders and number of shares owned for any particular "record date." They do this on a regular basis for routine corporate purposes, such as the corporate annual meeting. They could easily do the same on the dates that they wish to make political contributions or expenditures. For more detail, see the letter from Professor John C. Coates IV of Harvard Law School, a former General Counsel and Director of the Division of Corporate Finance at the U.S. Securities Exchange Commission.³⁷

How many companies would be covered by this bill?

Foreign investment in U.S. companies has increased dramatically in recent years: "from about 5% of all U.S. corporate equity (public and private) in 1982 to more than 20% in 2015.”³⁸ By 2019, that figure had increased to 40%.³⁹ However, foreign ownership is not evenly distributed. Analysis by the Center for American Progress found that the thresholds in this bill would cover 98% of the companies listed on the S&P 500 index, but only 28% of the firms listed on the Russell Microcap Index—among the smallest companies that are publicly traded.⁴⁰ It is much more difficult to obtain data regarding ownership of privately-held companies, but generally most small local businesses have zero foreign ownership and would not be subject to this law’s political spending prohibition.

Does this bill create a compliance burden for small businesses?

As noted above, most small local businesses have zero foreign ownership, and they know it. In that case, they can easily provide a statement certifying that, after due inquiry, the company was not a foreign-influenced company (as defined by the law) on the date the independent expenditure or contribution was made.

For those few small businesses that do have a foreign investor, they typically know exactly who it is and how much the foreign investor owns. Thus, they can easily determine whether the foreign investment exceeds the thresholds (in which case they are prohibited from using corporate money for political spending) or not (in which case they can confidently provide the statement). Finally, the statement of certification explicitly only requires a reasonable inquiry. In most cases, this will be resolved by the address—an address in a foreign country establishes that the investor is foreign unless the investor is known to be a U.S. citizen residing abroad, and an address in the U.S. establishes a presumption that the investor is domestic.

Does this bill violate the rights of U.S. investors?

No. Individual U.S. investors may spend unlimited amounts of their own money on elections. Nor does the bill restrict the ability of U.S. investors to spend their money through the vehicle of a corporation in which they share ownership in association with other U.S. citizens. It only limits their ability to spent money through the vehicle of a corporation that is at best an association of citizens and non-citizens.

³⁹ See Steve Rosenthal and Theo Burke, Who’s Left to Tax? US Taxation of Corporations and Their Shareholders, Urban-Brookings Tax Policy Ctr., paper presented at NYU School of Law (Oct. 27, 2020), <https://bit.ly/3uLjVqE>.

⁴⁰ Michael Sozan, Ctr. for Am. Progress, Ending Foreign-Influenced Corporate Spending in U.S. Elections (Nov. 21, 2019), at 42-45, <https://ampr.gs/2QLiNQT>.

Their right to invest in a corporation with that expectation is limited by valid restrictions imposed on the hybrid corporate association of citizens and non-citizens. Any impact on U.S. investors who have chosen to invest jointly with foreign investors is incidental to the primary purpose of preventing foreign influence. And a recent U.S. Supreme Court decision, written by Justice Kavanaugh, made it clear that U.S. citizens “cannot export their own First Amendment rights” to the foreign entities with which they associate.⁴¹ The Court’s reasoning leads to the same result when U.S. entities associate with foreign nationals in the corporate form: the mere fact that U.S. citizens have the independent right to contribute and make expenditures does not mean that those rights will flow to any association they form with non-citizens.

What if a U.S. investor holds a majority or controlling share?

The danger of foreign participation remains. As corporate law expert Professor John Coates of Harvard Law School and his co-authors note:

A stylized and largely uncontested fact is that institutional shareholders—the most likely to be blockholders of U.S. public companies—are increasingly influential in the governance of those companies. Various changes in markets and regulation have increased the ability of such institutions to encourage, pressure or force boards to adopt policies and positions that twenty years ago would have been beyond their reach. Board members are spending increased amounts of time responding to and directly “engaging” with blockholders. While in the past legal regimes tested “control” of foreign nationals at higher levels of ownership—majority voting power, or 25% blocks for example—those regimes may no longer catch the new forms of institutional influence.⁴²

Federal communications law has been addressing a very similar issue for nearly 90 years. Since 1934, section 310 of the federal Communications Act has prohibited issuance of broadcast or common carrier licenses to companies with one-fifth foreign ownership.⁴³ Obviously, that raises a similar issue: a company with one-fifth foreign ownership has four-fifths U.S. ownership. Yet, as Congress determined, the risks were too great even with a four-fifths U.S. owner. We are only aware of one constitutional challenge to Section 310 in its nearly 90-year-history—the challenge concerned a slightly different point, but the court upheld the provision.⁴⁴ The same logic would apply to this bill.

⁴² Coates et al., supra note 38, at 5, https://papers.ssrn.com/sol3/papers.cfm?abstract_id=2857957.

What if the corporation takes proactive steps to ensure that foreign investors have no influence on corporate decision-making regarding political spending?

The corporation's speech rights derive from its shareholders. The corporation speaks for and acts in the interests of its shareholders. Corporate executives are fully aware of their major investors, act with a fiduciary duty towards those investors, and tend to avoid taking action that they anticipate will displease those major investors. Among other considerations, major investors have multiple options for influencing corporate governance directly and indirectly: they can submit shareholder resolutions; they can wage proxy battles; they can wield their control over the selection and dismissal of directors on the board; they can dump or threaten to dump their shares to pressure the corporation to take actions; and they can simply pick up the phone and call the corporate executives. And much of its influence will not leave a paper trail.

A similar question has repeatedly arisen in the context of the Communications Act, where partly-foreign-owned entities have sought broadcast or common carrier licenses, claiming that they had developed contractual or other internal measures to insulate decision-making from foreign partners or investors. Courts have consistently rejected such challenges.⁴⁵

Does this bill apply to non-profits?

The bill applies only to for-profit entities. It does not regulate non-profit organizations, including trade associations. Federal law already substantially addresses non-profit organizations that receive a contribution directly from a foreign national.⁴⁶ This bill pertains to foreign owners of U.S. corporations, for which there is no analogy in a non-profit, which has no owners.

⁴⁵ See Cellwave Tel. Servs. LP v. FCC., 30 F.3d 1533, 1535 (D.C. Cir. 1994) (rejecting argument that FCC should have granted license to partly-foreign-owned partnership because "the alien partners had insulated themselves by contract from any management role in the partnerships"); Moving Phones P'ship L.P. v. FCC, 998 F.2d 1051, 1055-57 (D.C. Cir. 1993) (same).

What about trade associations with members that are foreign-influenced companies?

If a trade association establishes or qualifies as a political committee or incidental committee stating that money contributed to it will be used in candidate elections, this bill specifically provides that the committee may dedicate any contributions that do not satisfy the law for other lawful purposes. For example, a trade association might set aside funds received from businesses that did not submit a statement of certification and use those funds for activities other than spending them on candidate elections.

Does this bill apply to labor unions?

No. We are unaware of evidence that any money whatsoever from foreign members' dues is ever spent by unions in U.S. elections. As for noncitizen, non-permanent resident workers who may be members of U.S. labor unions, they are qualitatively different from the foreign entities that invest in U.S. corporations. Almost without exception, immigrant workers in U.S. labor unions are physically located in the United States, where they enjoy most rights under the U.S. Constitution; activities related to democratic self-government (including political spending) are the exception. By contrast, this law would apply only to foreign investors who are physically located abroad.⁴⁷ Under the Supreme Court's 2020 decision in Agency for International Development, foreign entities located abroad have no rights under the U.S. Constitution.⁴⁸

What compliance obligations does this bill impose on candidates and committees?

None. The compliance mechanism built into the bill is simple and effective; it requires only that, within seven days after making a political contribution or expenditure, that the CEO of the contributing corporation provide a statement of certification that the corporation is not a foreign-influenced corporation. This bill does not impose any obligations or requirements on candidates or committees, and the obligation on the corporate contribution is minimal, efficient, and effective.

⁴⁸ Agency for Int'l Dev. v. Alliance for Open Society Int'l, Inc., 140 S. Ct. 2082, 2086–87 (2020).

Committee on Judiciary & Hawaiian Affairs
Hawai'i Alliance for Progressive Action (HAPA) Supports SB2982 SD1
Wednesday, March 18, 2026, at 2:00 PM | Conference Room 325 & Videoconference

Aloha Chair Tarnas, Vice Chair Poepoe, and members of the Committee,

HAPA supports SB2982 SD2, which strengthens Hawai'i's protections against foreign money in our elections by prohibiting foreign-influenced business entities from making contributions, expenditures, or electioneering communications in state elections.

Hawai'i already prohibits foreign nationals and foreign corporations from making campaign contributions. SB2982 SD2 closes the next gap: business entities that are not themselves foreign corporations, but are significantly owned or controlled by foreign investors. Under this bill, a business entity qualifies as foreign-influenced if a single foreign investor holds one percent or more of its ownership interest, if six or more foreign investors collectively hold five percent or more, or if a foreign investor participates directly or indirectly in the entity's political decision-making. Those entities would be prohibited from making contributions, expenditures, electioneering communications, or donations earmarked for election purposes.

The bill also establishes a certification requirement. Any for-profit business entity that contributes or spends money in a state election must file a signed statement from its CEO, under penalty of perjury, confirming that the entity is not a foreign corporation or foreign-influenced business entity. Noncandidate committees making only independent expenditures must also obtain similar certifications from their top contributors.

This is a meaningful and well-constructed expansion of existing protections. The federal government has documented ongoing campaigns by foreign actors, including Russia, China, and Iran, to undermine democratic institutions through election interference. Hawai'i should not be a back door for that kind of influence through nominally domestic business entities with significant foreign ownership.

The bill includes a severability provision and a built-in correction mechanism: if any conditions defining foreign-influenced business entities are struck down by a court, the Campaign Spending Commission is required to establish revised conditions that are constitutional. That is responsible, durable drafting.

HAPA respectfully urges this committee to pass SB2982 SD2.

Aloha Chair, Vice Chair, and Members of the Committee,

I am testifying in strong support of SB2982, which would ban foreign influence in Hawai‘i’s political campaigns.

The cornerstone of our democracy is the principle that our elections must reflect the will of the people—the citizens and residents of Hawai‘i and the United States. The integrity of this process is non-negotiable. Yet, the increasing flow of foreign money into political campaigns, both nationally and at the state level, represents a clear and present danger to our self-governance.

Foreign governments, corporations, and individuals have no legitimate role in determining who represents the people of our state or what policies we enact. Their interests are, in this age of geopolitical upheaval, by definition not our interests. Allowing their influence, whether direct or indirect, corrupts our political discourse and risks aligning our laws and priorities with agendas that can be hostile to the economic security, public health, and sovereignty of Hawai‘i.

While federal law prohibits foreign nationals from making contributions or expenditures in federal elections, state-level campaigns remain a vulnerable target for exploitation. Sophisticated actors can use loopholes, shell entities, or digital misinformation campaigns to sway our local elections and ballot initiatives. This is not a hypothetical threat; it is a documented tactic in the modern geopolitical landscape.

SB2982 is a critical and timely safeguard. It would enact clear, strong prohibitions at the state level to ensure that our state elections are decided solely by us. It protects the sanctity of our most fundamental civic process from those who do not share our allegiance or our aloha.

This bill is a declaration of electoral independence. It affirms that the power to choose our leaders belongs exclusively to the people of Hawai‘i. By passing SB2982, you will send an unequivocal message that our democracy is not for sale to the highest foreign bidder.

For the security of our elections and the preservation of our self-determination, I urge you to pass SB2982.

Mahalo for the opportunity to testify.

Aloha Chair Tarnas, Vice Chair Poepoe, and members of the Committee,

I'm submitting the following testimony in support of SB2982 SD2.

Hawai'i bans foreign nationals and foreign corporations from contributing to our elections. But that ban has a gap. A company with significant foreign ownership can still pour money into our campaigns as long as it's technically incorporated here. This loophole must be closed.

SB2982 SD2 does just that by prohibiting foreign-influenced business entities from making contributions, expenditures, or electioneering communications in state elections, and by requiring businesses that do spend money in our elections to certify they aren't foreign-influenced. Our elections should be decided by the people of Hawai'i, not foreign investors.

We must do all we can to bolster faith in the integrity of our voting process.

Please pass SB2982 SD2.

Aloha Chair Tarnas, Vice Chair Poepoe, and members of the Committee,

I'm submitting testimony in support of SB2982 SD2.

Hawai'i bans foreign nationals and foreign corporations from contributing to our elections. But that ban has a gap. A company with significant foreign ownership can still pour money into our campaigns as long as it's technically incorporated here. It's important that we look at this and keep our elections with the people of this place.

SB2982 SD2 closes that gap by prohibiting foreign-influenced business entities from making contributions, expenditures, or electioneering communications in state elections, and by requiring businesses that do spend money in our elections to certify they aren't foreign-influenced. Our elections should be decided by the people of Hawai'i, not foreign investors.

Please pass SB2982 SD2.

For example, Mahi Pono, which owns 40,000 acres of land on Maui and the EMI water system is 100% owned by PSP Investments, Public Sector Pension Investment Board, one of Canada's largest pension investment managers, established in 1999 to invest funds for the pension plans of the federal Public Service, Canadian Armed Forces, Royal Canadian Mounted Police, and the Reserve Force. This foreign entity has attempted to influence elections in various ways since incorporating in Hawaii as a "Hawaii farming company" in 2018.

SB2982 SD2 closes one gap by prohibiting foreign-influenced business entities from making contributions, expenditures, or electioneering communications in state elections, and by requiring businesses that do spend money in our elections to certify they aren't foreign-influenced. Our elections should be decided by the people of Hawai'i, not foreign investors.

Aloha Chair Tarnas, Vice Chair Poepoe, and members of the Committee,

I am writing in support of SB 2530, SD2.

Right now, while a company holds a state contract, its officers and their family members can still make political contributions to the officials who oversee that contract. And organizations that receive state grants face no contribution restrictions at all. That creates an obvious appearance of pay-to-play politics even when no wrongdoing occurs.

SB 2530 closes these gaps by extending contribution prohibitions to officers and family members of contractors and grantees above certain thresholds and requiring disclosure of their names. Government contracts and grants should be awarded on merit, not on the basis of political relationships.

Please support SB 2530, SD2.

Keep foreign influence out of U.S. election camapaigns. Our elected officials should not be bought by foreign governements that dictate their policy over our lives. We already see how DESPICABLE ISRAEL has been in sending us to WAR and draining our tax dollars for their personal gain. We deserve to be represented by people that want to serve the citizens of the United States.

Honorable Chair Tarnas, Vice Chair Poepoe, and Members of the Committee,

I am writing to ask that you support SB2982 SD2 which expands Hawai'i's ban on foreign money in elections to cover foreign-influenced business entities. It requires for-profit businesses that spend money in state elections to certify under penalty of perjury that they are not foreign-influenced. And it requires noncandidate committees making only independent expenditures to obtain similar certifications from their top contributors

Thank you for your attention and consideration.

Dear Committee Members,

Thank you for giving Common Cause Hawai'i the chance to testify in strong support of this measure. Since citizens untied decision of the supreme court a flood of dark has entered our elections. We have also seen an increasing flood of influence from foreign nations; this has led to great national security concern. In this environment actors funded by foreign interest can outspend American voices in their own elections. Furthermore, corporations are using foreign investors money to move into smaller communities and out spend local candidates to bring in individuals who vote in line with their business interest rather than the interest of the community. This bill begins to offer a solution to the major issue we have with money in politics. This law could very well begin to fix the broken valve of keeping dark money out of our politics.
